There are pub crawls, there are babies' first crawls, and now there are cupcake crawls. In a city with cupcake shops as ubiquitous as gay bars, and double-decker Sex and the City tour buses, it's shocking that it's taken so long to adopt a crawl devoted to the frosted, crumbly-on-a-bad-day, chocolate-filled-at-its-best treats. Alas, now it's happening, and SugarTooth Tours is pioneering the movement. Starting next Wednesday, April 17th, the official "Cupcake Crawl Across Manhattan" commences with its three-hour crawls happening most Wednesdays through Saturdays, from 2pm to 5pm.

Three hours of consuming large quantities of cupcakes from six of NYC's top cupcake shops takes stamina and a steely will to uncover the city's finest desserts, but lucky for you, there's a good deal of walking (and some subway action) involved on this pursuit – giving you the time to reflect on all you just consumed and come to the most mindful and informed decision. And also "burn calories."

I don't want to spoil all the fun, but you can bet that (my favorites) Sweet Revenge & Billy's Bakery are stops on the tour, among some other surprises. Wear sweatpants, come hungry, leave suga-buzzed. Get the Cupcake Crawl details & follow Bonnie on Twitter here.
